La Voz News will continue as a class/online publication in the spring quarter, and I'll also be teaching a feature writing class. For both classes, students are required to conduct "live" interviews -- under our current circumstances, phone or video interviews. Can you please encourage professors and administrators to respond to interview requests and schedule phone/video interviews with students? La Voz has the potential to provide valuable information and a sense of community that goes beyond the role and purview of the marketing department. Real-time interviews will help meet that goal.
